Fliers Braved Return in Crippled Plane

"The following is Roger Q. Williams' own account of his flight in Bermuda and back. The first part of it was written while the plane was en route to Bermuda. It was dropped from the plane there and dispatched back to New York. The second part was recounted by Williams after he landed at Curtiss Field last night."

Curtiss Field, N. Y., June 30.—We hit a bad rain as we were approaching the Bermuda Islands, and one of our magnets out off. It left us in a very bad fix.

SCHOOLS OF SHARKS

We circled the islands in an effort to find a landing field, but found nothing suitable. We therefore dropped our bag of mail and decided the only thing to do was to head out to sea and face the 750 miles back to New York on our magnet.

We were searching for a break in the weather to permit our magnet to dry out. Therefore after 24 minutes, we were homeward bound.

About an hour after we left the island, our magnet began to function again, and the crew were so pleased to see her working O. K. again that we gave the motor three gallons of fresh oil.

Our trip back started out rather eventfully. We were watching sharks and our course because we were on a steamship route and the sharks were sticking close to the food supply.

Instead of setting our course for Ambrose Light, we set our course for Roosevelt Field, N. Y., arriving there at 9:30. We found it was shrouded in a heavy fog and the sharks were sticking close to the food supply.

On both directions of our trip upon encountering steamers Bermuda and Port St. George, we circled them low and they looked up with their whistles. We could see the passengers crowding over to one side of the deck to see us.

Arriving at Bermuda, we had planned to circle Hamilton, the chief city, for half an hour and cover the town, but due to the tardiness of rain, we were unable to circle the island once. While looking for an emergency landing field, we dropped our mail bag on the parade ground, west of Hamilton, and took our departure. Our idea was to get out of the storm.

We had rain all the way down from the Gulf stream, the showers being a number and as dense as rain. We were within 10 miles of Bermuda. Then it became dawn.

There was a very interesting thing occurred. We were flying with low than one-half visibility and were flying wholly by instruments. We passed over a harbor going in an opposite direction and apparently trying to keep out of the storm.

FOUR FLEED BY AMMUNITION

Lewell, June 30.—Ammunition forces knocked out four firemen today at the building at the time of the break which was caused by a slightly affected four employees and caused all traffic and pedestrians from the district.

The firemen affected were: Almont, Gilman S., assistant chief; Marshall, John, chauffeur for Chief Sullivan.

The firemen volunteered to try to place a hole in the ammonia line, but the hole was not made. The break was a fairly serious one, but the firemen were able to contain the leak, but being unable to move their limbs, they returned to renew their efforts after being given air.

The four employees who were slightly affected were the only ones on our course because we were on a steamship route and the sharks were sticking close to the food supply.

There was a very interesting thing occurred. We were flying with low than one-half visibility and were flying wholly by instruments. We passed over a harbor going in an opposite direction and apparently trying to keep out of the storm.

Our first urge was to follow the boat, thinking it must be our escape toward Bermuda, but our expectation and our better judgment kept us on the course we were covering and in a few minutes Bermuda showed up on our starboard bow, less than half a mile distant.

MAGNETO DROWNED

We circled over the radio tower and the military reservation near Hamilton, and set out for Hamilton, where we were hit by an even more terrific downpour of rain. It drowned out one of our magnets and sent the water splashing into the engine.

The great question then was whether to keep on trying to find a landing field, or seek a field of refuge. We decided to seek a field of refuge, and after hunting fruitlessly for 20 minutes in the terrific rain, and checking the beaches and golf courses, we decided that the boys who said that there were no landing fields in Bermuda were quite right.

Having the safety of the crew and the responsibility for the trip on our minds, we decided to head back to the open sea and take a change on hitting sunshine and drier weather. We also were desirous of getting back to Roosevelt Field as soon after dark as possible, thereby cutting down the hazard of night flying and encountering fog.

The weather information given us by Dr. Kimball proved to be correct. The open sea was a fine place of flying and navigating.

EMPLOYERS SEE LINGLE AS A GANG CHIEF

Declare Slain Reporter Used Position to Profit From Criminal Operations

Chicago, June 30 (AP)—The Chicago Tribune today, in both its editorial and news columns, took definite cognizance of the sinister rumors that have attached themselves to the career of its slain reporter, Alfred (Jake) Lingle.

It sets forth, editorially, that the first report of the State's attorney's investigators, which goes into details concerning the reporter's finances, would indicate that Alfred Lingle was killed because he was using his Tribune position to profit from criminal operations and not because he was serving the Tribune as it thought he was.

Pointing out the developments resulting from the investigation, the newspaper says:

"Unlucky new takes a different character, one in which he was unknown to the management of the Tribune when he was slain. He is dead now and cannot defend himself. Many facts now revealed must be accepted as eloquent against him. He was not, and could not have been, a good reporter. His ability did not contain these possibilities. He would write stories, but he could get information from the underworld. The reasonable appearance against Lingle now is that he was accepted in the world of politics and crime for something in his hand, in his office, and that he used this in underhand ways to make his death."

Weds La Coste

Paris, June 30 (AP)—Rene La Coste, France's tennis idol, and Miss Simone Thion de Chateau, the premier woman golfer of France, were married in the Church of St. Clothilde at noon today.

It was a life contract of two of France's most admired young sports exponents. La Coste, former world's tennis champion, and also a glider pilot, received the congratulations of all France, as did his bride.

The modernity of the 1920s continues was tempered by the medieval pageantry of the Catholic Church, making the affair one of the most impressive weddings Paris has seen in many years.

Miss Simone was attired all in white satin and tulle. She smiled radiantly throughout the ceremony, excepting for that single solemn moment of the marriage vows.

The wedding had been postponed often, due to a condition in La Coste's lungs brought about by playing tennis in the rain, but he had no other choice.

He and Miss La Coste, who have been married for a year, honeymooned tour of Europe.

The Conference of Governors Hears Him Play New Economic Theory

Salt Lake City, June 30 (AP)—Unemployment insurance, including old age security, was advanced by Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York in an address before the National Governors' Conference here today as an economic necessity to meet situations such as he said exists in the United States at present.

Shorter working days and shorter working weeks, better planning of work to prevent periods of unemployment, increased public works, while they may relieve unemployment will not eliminate it, the New York executive said.

"Unemployment insurance was shall come to this country just as certainly as we have come to workmen's compensation for industrial injury," he said, "just as certainly as we are today in the midst of a national wave of increasing old age security."

"Ninety per cent of unemployment is wholly without the fault of the worker. Other nations and governments have undertaken various systems which insure their workers when unemployment occurs. Why should we fail to undertake the task?"

Of the present unemployment situation, Gov. Roosevelt said: "Personally, I differ fundamentally with some eminent gentlemen in public life who recently have tried to sell the nation a wholly new economic theory, especially in 1929 and 1930. This theory, contrary to all teaching of history, was that prosperity that is, constant work for everybody, man and woman, who was willing to work would continue as long as high wages were continued, combined with a high pressure selling campaign to dispose of the output."

THEORY BLOWN UP

Unfortunately for some of our Western friends, this new theory that although a man could sell his services for as high a price as he was willing to work would continue as long as high wages were continued, combined with a high pressure selling campaign to dispose of the output.

When between 15 and 15 workers, out of every hundred men are out of a job in very many industries, it is neither profitable nor useful to let them employment that purely psychological, and only stand in the way of a 75 per cent output.

POSSE HOW THE STUDENT

New Bedford, June 30.—Bloodhounds led a posse of state troopers and Boy Scouts through the swampy woodlands along the old Fall River road today in a search for John B. Perry, 19, missing Williams and Mary College freshman.

They shouted to him: "John, I want to speak to you a minute."

The student, believed suffering from a breakdown from overwork, ran into the swamp.

The search was hampered by heavy woodland and dense swamps covering several square miles of area. The search was hampered by heavy woodland and dense swamps covering several square miles of area.

Tabs said Perry wore the same clothing he had on when last seen Tuesday in a New Bedford store. He was wearing a blue serge coat and black shoes. He wore a hat and appeared haggard.

His brother, William E. Perry, New Bedford attorney, offered a reward of $100 today for the boy's apprehension. He believes if he is caught he will perish in the swamps.

Perry is 20 and recently returned to his home after completing his first year studies at Williams. He was tentatively planning to spend a summer job at a Maine hotel when he dropped from sight, with only $1.

PULLS SLEIGH ON HOT DAY

While Dorchester sweltered in the midday sun, citizens were cheered by the sight of a sleigh drawn by a white horse through the streets.

The sleigh, equipped with a driver and a passenger, appeared along Old Colony av. and Dorchester st. and drew the plaudits of the crowd. It finally landed on the dump and the horse was returned to a lively stable.

Dante Is Lauded in Catholic Truth Period Talk

JOSEPH A. SCALPONI, assistant director of Suffolk, speaking yesterday noon Station WJAC in the Catholic Truth Period, said that Dante is dead, but his teachings dominate the world. "A poet, a seer, an educator, the genius of the 13th century, the inspiration of all succeeding years, made peace with his God in the year 1321," said the speaker. "He is at rest, not in Florence, the city of his birth, but in the place that gave him shelter, the beautiful city of Ravenna. He is dead, but his spirit lives. His teachings dominate the world."

THE CONTRIBUTION MADE to civilization by the great and illustrious Christopher Columbus is common knowledge. His courage, faith and imagination discovered and opened up a new world. So Dante Alighieri, father of Italian culture, literature and national unity, sailing upon a vast ocean, had 500 years before Columbus discovered and opened up wider regions for the inspiration of mankind.

DANTE SUMMED UP all the learning of a truly learned man. He embodied all the greatness of a brilliant patriot. He synthesized the philosophy of 19 tumultuous centuries. He conquered, by an unerring faith and mental loyalty, the bitterness of an early life and turned them into a spiritual victory.

His writings covered the realms of politics, philosophy, and theology. Yet in all his profound researches the foundation of which started the world by his transcendent beauty, he was guided by his Catholic faith.

DAILY ANTIQUE

THIS CUP WAS FOUND in the ruins of a warehouse on High at the disastrous Boston fire of 1872. The cup, battered and fluted by molten chips that had flowed against it and hardened, has the words "Remember Me" faintly written on it in gold. It is apparently a child's mug. In pencil are written the words "Fire, 1872." The cup is about three and a half inches high and beside the gold letters has three gold bands running around it. The handle is a large piece of china that was stuck on by the intense heat. The cup is at least 16 years old and probably much older.

From Paris Bureau, Boston Evening American.

Paris, June 30.

LA MODE IS ALWAYS an important starter at the more fashionable racing events, and Longchamps is one of the tracks where the race is not always to the swift, but generally is in the direction of beautifully dressed women.

THE RACE TRACK is certainly the ideal setting for delightful clothes and in that a great deal of latitude is allowed one is practically certain to see every variety of costume from a garden party rig-out to a severely tailored suit, with clever coats and attractive ensembles also contributing to the pageant.

COATS AND ENSEMBLES have certainly outnumbered the suits so far, and cape coats have been very much in evidence. Most of the clothes seen so far seem to be of the eminently wearable and practical type yet without daintiness and delicacy, helping to make Longchamps even more beguiling than ever.

WE HAVE had sketched for you two very good looking outfits worn at Longchamps recently. The first is of a striking cape coat in a light-weight woolen, a sort of madras or homespun. It is of soft dove gray with a slightly circular cape, fitting very snugly over the shoulders and bordered with matching gray fox.

ON THE SLEEVES are narrow turn-back cuffs of soft material and the lines of the coat proper are severely straight. A gray satin and fine straw toques matches the coat exactly in tone and the gloves and shoes also contribute to the symphony in gray.

THE OTHER SKETCH is of a one piece dress with a half-length coat—a very novel ensemble. The material is dark brown heavy silk crepe. The bust and flitting collar and the sleeves are of a bold and clever design. The coat is a simple, without any ornamentation and has an ample circular skirt of moderate length.

BARON DECEIS is the great grandson of the late Louis Bonaparte, who, as archbishop of Tuam, was created a peer of Ireland on December 22, 1912, as Baron Deceis of Deceis County, Waterford, which title had been bestowed by his maternal grandfather, James De La Poer, third and last Viscount Deceis and Earl of Tyrone of the De La Poer family.

THROUGH HER MOTHER, the young woman, who will soon be part and parcel of the social life on Long Island, is a granddaughter of the late James Deceis and a great granddaughter of the late Jay Gould and of the late Mrs. Charles Kingston.

SOMETHING NEW and interesting in club connections is the clubwomen of the second district of the city, who are planning a reunion of the Abington Women's Club, when they meet again in the fall, thanks to the hospitality of the district director, Mrs. George E. Gormley. It is to be a district reunion and it is planned for January 29, with the Old Colony Club of South Weymouth as hostess.

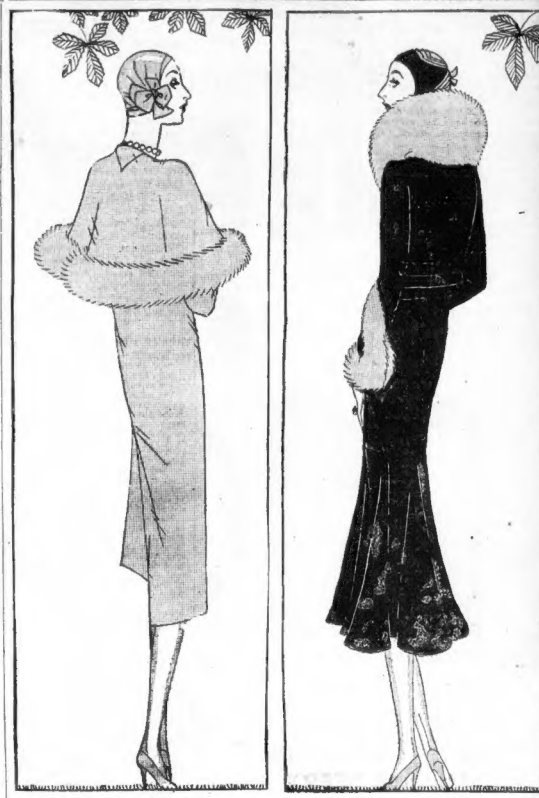

THE FRIENDLY COMMITTEE which is not possible at some of the other conferences which have a more important program, and which perhaps has been planned especially for club presidents, will dominate the reunion, Mrs. Gormley says. She wants the club women of her district to really know each other (as Nancy suggested in her column a few days ago), and this play-day will do the trick.

THE PRESIDENTS of the 28 clubs in the second district with a delegation, one for every 50 members, have been invited, for whom a varied and unusual program is being planned. The cup in the district is present, also. Thus the membership-large will participate in the reunion.

OTHER DATES for the district are announced by Mrs. Gormley include:

Eat Right to Keep Cool

"The time has come," the Walrus said, "to talk of many things—of ice cream—ah—and strawberries, and frozen sweet puddings!" Of course, you know I made up the last part of that but you can't say it doesn't rhyme, and certainly we're all talking about what to have for dessert these hot days! So let's make it a real food talk. I've been browsing back through my files and I can't find a number of really luscious hot weather desserts, which with the thermometer at 90 in the shade—when there is any—the family is guaranteed to welcome with open arms. Here's the first one: MOCK BISCUIT TORTONI. Boak one tablespoon of granulated gelatin in one-half cup of cold water ten minutes. Beat one egg, add one-third cupful of sugar and one cupful of hot milk. Cook in a double boiler, stirring constantly until mixture becomes creamy and clings to the spoon. Remove from the fire, add one cupful of cream and the soaked gelatin. Stir until gelatin is dissolved, then turn into a cold bowl and set aside until cold and somewhat thickened. Then add one cupful of macaroni crumbs, when well mixed, fold in one cupful of whipped cream and one teaspoonful of vanilla flavoring. Turn into mold and set aside in a cool place until needed.

Add 1/2 tsp. vanilla, then have the whites of three hard-boiled eggs beaten stiff and add to the already beaten gelatin. Beat until it is stiff and set on ice to set. Put this in a shallow tin which has been oiled. When ready, cut into squares and roll in Kellogg's Corn Flakes just before serving. Sprinkle shredded walnuts on top. BOSTON'S FIRST ELECTRICALLY ARC-WELDED OFFICE BUILDING

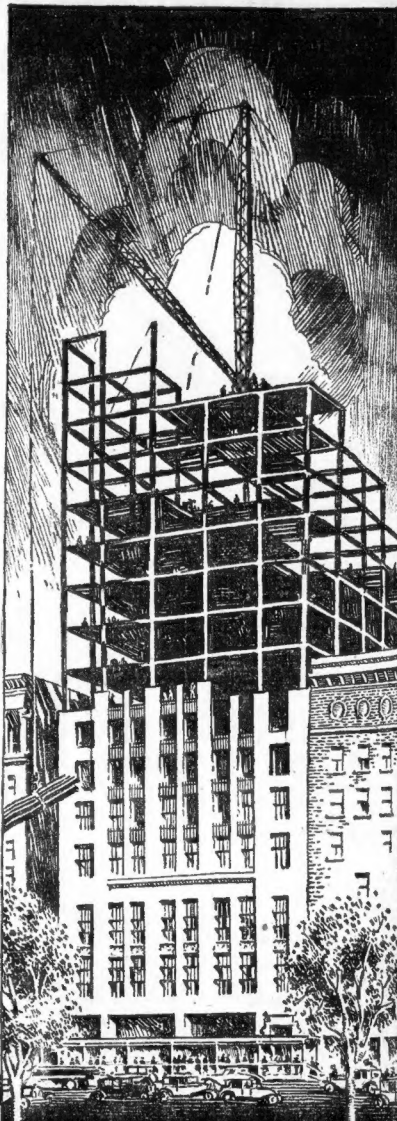

The first practical application of electric arc welding on a major Boston building project is under way—marking a new era in modern construction methods.

Electric arc welding—of steel structures—has many mechanical and economic superiorities—from the engineering standpoint, but for the general public, the great advantage is that it is wholly noiseless.

It is particularly fitting that The Boston Edison Company should be the first to use electric arc welding, locally, on a large construction project . . . Its new office building at 182 Tremont Street is being welded throughout—not a rivet will be driven in the entire fourteen stories.

Wholly apart from mechanical superiorities . . . the silence of electric arc welding is affording welcome relief to neighbors and passers-by in the vicinity of 182 Tremont Street.

The hooded figure of the electric arc welder symbolizes the silence and efficiency of this new, quiet method of joining steel structures, as electricity expands into still another field of public usefulness.

TEXAN'S WIN PROVES BIG SURPRISE

4. The American had expected to win and Allison to lose.

Alison and Borotra met in one of the semifinals, while Dore and Allison fought it out in the other.

Cochet took his defeat by Allison lightly.

"Allison was much too good for me," he said. "I felt the sudden conditions but the outcome probably would have been the same. The American played marvellously."

Allison's Victory a Tremendous Upset

Allison's victory came like a bolt from the blue. The leading Texan, ranked only seventh in singles among United States players and in the Davis Cup team in doubles and John Hennessey, coach, had been expected to be lucky to take a single set.

Allison has been playing greatest tennis ever since his arrival in England, but he never reached the heights attained in beating the champion. The second team was given a great ovation by the throng of 15,000 that jammed the center court stands.

It was the first time Cochet had been beaten by an American since 1927, when Bill Tilden, and in the Davis Cup challenges round and John Hennessey, coach, had been in the national championships at Forest Hills.

Cochet had been looked upon as virtually unbeatable and the American Davis Cup team had had little hope of uncovering a player who could defeat him.

Miss Sarah Palfrey, young Boston player, and Greta M. Stanger, New York, N. J., won in mixed doubles from J. Grandguillet and Miss S. Barber of France, 4-6, 6-3, 6-2.

Miss Hennessey and Miss G. O. Hather, American doubles school, from Texas, and Miss E. E. Haylock, Kentucky, 6-4, 6-3.

Miss Helen Wills Moody and Miss Elizabeth Ryan won in the third round of women's doubles from Mrs. J. H. Stocks and Mrs. L. O. Owen, 6-1, 6-3.

Allison with his Davis Cup doubles partner, John Van Ryn, won in men's doubles, 6-4, 6-3, 6-2.

In mixed doubles Miss Elizabeth Ryan and the Australian star, Jack Crawford, defeated Yoshio Ota, Japan, and Miss M. E. Dix, 6-4, 6-2.

Johnny meets Tuffy Griffiths, highly touted bout City, Ia. puncher, in the 10-round fight, which will be a technical knockout.

Risko may not be going anywhere in particular, but he takes an unorthodox view in seeing that none of his rivals do either. Always on the offensive, he seems, when he tackles one of the leaders, Risko, more often than not, has slipped, cuffed and roughed his way to victory or made his opponent look entirely unimpressive.

A veteran as fighter, Risko has lost only one year's decisive defeat in recent years, losing to Max Schmeling here last year. A few weeks ago, Risko dropped Pauline Urcidun all around the ring in a 10-round battle at Detroit.

ROSLINDALE MAY SHIFT

After next Friday night it would not be at all surprising if the Roslindale Greater Boston Twilight League club made a shift from Fallon Field, Roslindale, to Walpole.

That announcement was made by Managers Fred Melin and Frank Fallon of the Roslindale club today. When questioned whether it would shift the present week at Fallon Field, the two owners stated that they would go through with the schedule.

The managers contend that their expenses are high and in order to win the players which are representing it on the diamond it will be necessary to seek another place to represent, where the crowds would turn out in greater numbers.

Three Tied for Top in Concord Tourney

Otis M. Whitney, Robert P. Hawkins and David A. Baldwin, each 3 down, were tied for first prize in the handicap vs. par tournament, at two-thirds handicap, staged at the Concord Country Club today.

John M. Abbott, 3 down, had the best score, in a large field of 42 golfers. Burleigh Pratt won the prize in the first consolation division of the championship tournament, defeating William F. Graham, Jr., 2 and 1.

In the second division of the tournament, Russell G. Fessenden was the winner, defeating Miss Margaret Conine, 8 and 2.

Through the medium of his great ability as a golfer and his engaging personality, Horton Smith made many new friends during the exhibition yesterday at the Pine Brook Valley Country Club.

Although he has only been exhibiting his wares for two years, Horton Smith is the most popular professional in golf. He is all business engaged in a match, but he does not overdo it and he is always regaining with that million dollar smile.

Horton Smith and Leo Deigel will make their next appearance in an exhibition match next Wednesday at the Winchester Country Club, when they will engage Francis Outmet and George Voigt in an 18-hole match.

After finishing second in all three matches of the Salem exhibition, Phil Rolando will continue in golf in the future to mixed foursomes, a style of play with which he has met with excellent success.

Barney Coyne, the St. John's Prep star athlete, who by the way, is headed for Columbia, has performed with the ruddy system at the Salem Country Club before any boy is allowed to carry, he is trained in detail, with the result that visitors seldom fail to speak of the excellence of the caddy service.

Ruth's Home Runs Tonic to Baseball

The fans in the grandstand at Fenway Park were discussing Babe Ruth's latest home run drive as Mr. Boston came upon the scene.

"The Babe has certainly been clouting the old slugger this season," declared Mr. Boston. "He is way out front of his 1927 mark for this time of the year."

In 1927 the Babe hit up his record when he cracked a hit on home runs. I look for Ruth to reach this mark this year provided he isn't forced out of the game by an injury or sickness.

"I shall always have a warm spot in my heart for the Babe," said Mr. Boston. "He is the greatest player I have ever seen."

Ruth as I traveled with him in the days he played with the Red Sox, I also acted as his "caddy" when he first started grinding out a column for the newspaper.

Babe's "show" was very colorful, was a darling with the mob and would agree to write anything provided it was a home run. He was wise enough to know that more good will be built up by a home run than by any other way.

"I shall always give Ruth credit for saving baseball in the days following the Black Sox scandal."

The magnates drafted Judge Landis from a federal court bench in Chicago to save the situation. Landis helped, but it was Ruth's home runs which caused the public to forget how a group of crooked ball players betrayed a public trust. There wasn't anything crooked about the slugging home runs which Ruth sent crashing into the bleachers and over the fence at the various baseball orchards.

Ruth spent his Big Earnings Recklessly

"Money rolled into Ruth when he became the home run king. In addition to his big baseball contract he received large sums for playing exhibition games, from vaudeville and movie appearances, from newspaper services and for putting his okay on current trend products."

"In those days money didn't run a thing to the Sultan of Clubs. He spent money as fast as he earned it, sometimes faster. He played the race track and was the host for the gang wherever he went."

"Conservative baseball men felt sorry as they saw the Babe lose away his wealth. They knew that some day he would lose his ability as a hitter because of the baseball picture. It was argued that he would fade out of the baseball picture. It was argued that he would fade out of the baseball picture."

"Of course, it was true that baseball should always take care of the Babe. But the fact is that he was saving the game following the baseball scandal. But baseball might forget and Ruth would end up in jail, declared the friends of the mighty slugger."

Sickness Brought Ruth to His Senses

"Ruth became ill. They took him to a hospital in New York and the doctors operated upon the Babe."

"Babe had much time to think and reflect as he spent weeks in a hospital room. He realized that some day he would lose his ability as a hitter because of the baseball picture. It was argued that he would fade out of the baseball picture. It was argued that he would fade out of the baseball picture."

"Nature had blessed Ruth with a strong body and a strong mind and spirit. He was able to return to baseball when he got back into the game following the baseball scandal. But baseball might forget and Ruth would end up in jail, declared the friends of the mighty slugger."

"It was a new Ruth who showed the comeback trail. He always had the heart of a lion and the courage of a lion. He always had the heart of a lion and the courage of a lion."

"Ruth continued to be the darling of the fans. He was the hero of the hour. He was the hero of the hour. He was the hero of the hour."

"Ruth's earnings have increased. So has the principal of his trust fund. Babe has turned his back on baseball and has sufficient income for the needs of his family and himself."

"I know this will be pleasing news to Ruth's millions of admirers everywhere."

"In addition to gaining financial independence, Ruth is enjoying greater ball than ever. The man who never made a mistake, who never made a mistake, who never made a mistake."

"Ruth's earnings have increased. So has the principal of his trust fund. Babe has turned his back on baseball and has sufficient income for the needs of his family and himself."

LOCALS KEEP SEVENTH PLACE

It was the first complete and probably the most enjoyable Salt Lake twin-bill played in the Hub this season, and the result left the Wagnera still in seventh place.

Joe Cashman Jack Russell was Lyons' opponent in the night cap. He pitched almost as well as his rival, but he gave three hits and a fatal base on balls in the fourth frame which permitted the enemy to score twice, and that was all they needed to walk off with the decision.

Red Sox Toss Away Fine Chance to Win

The White Sox appeared lifeless in the opener. They gained confidence with Lyons twirling and looked immense in the nightcap.

The enemy got off to a one-run lead in the first inning of the first game, but the Red Sox scored twice in their half and were never headed thereafter.

Lisenbee weakened a bit toward the finish and when the hostiles scored three runs in the eighth they were only three runs behind, but "Hod" settled down and retired the side in order in the ninth.

All the scoring in the second game occurred in the fourth.

With one down, Jolley singled to left and fourth baseman Russ Hinkle handed out that fatal base on balls to Clancy and Kamm and Tate singled to send in two runs.

So far, the game was a tie, but of a double by a one-run homer, stab by Kamm. Scarritt followed with a drive to right which looked like a hit, but Raymond, the pitcher, got the drop of it and held the native fly-chaser to a single.

Webb followed with a liner to left, but it was poorly, but it was luck. After muddling around, he turned his play to the ball and shot out his glove and the agonized stopped to keep Webb on first.

Raymond, the pitcher, then pitched a scoreless game, but the rally which scored Scarritt but the rally ended there.

Several times thereafter, the Webb had fine chances but the luck was always against them.

Pilgrim Paintings at Art Museum

The Boston Museum of Fine Arts is making its contribution to the "Jesuit" Terecentenary observance with a loan exhibition of authentic portraits of distinguished members of the Massachusetts Bay colony. The exhibition will be on until September 23 in three galleries in the Evans Wing of the Museum.

Burglars Steal $2 in Park St. Church

Park Street church was broken into early today and four desks were tipped over and the contents scattered, but nothing except $2 in pennies was taken. Entrance was gained through a window on the side of the church. An effort was made to open the safe, but failed.

Fingerprints were found on the safe by Inspector James Singer. Police believe the break was made by the same thieves who broke into the Congregational church building 14 Becon st., four years ago.

Fashion Authority to Write for American

The Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser have engaged Anna Parrish, nationally recognized fashion authority, to direct daily feature articles on fashion subjects under the heading "What's in Fashion." The article, starting next Monday, July 1, will appear in the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser exclusively.

Anna Parrish has been known for years as a pioneer in studying and analyzing fashion changes and fashion trends. Her organization in New York and Paris has developed scientific methods of forecasting fashion months in advance.

"As you know, his excellence, the Governor, is extremely desirous of giving as much opportunity to labor as possible during the present recession of business," wrote Commissioner Howard.

By letting your counterparts at the earliest possible moment you can both give employment to labor and save money for the taxpayers.

"According to information which I have just received from the division of statistics of the Department of Labor and Industries, the building cost index is 25.5 points lower than the index for May 1, which is a reduction of more than 14 per cent. Costs today are lower than they have been at any time since 1912."

"While I have no doubt that you have been doing your best, I feel that the present situation warrants a further letter to urge every possible effort in order that you may take advantage of this unusual opportunity for letting construction contracts."

Fashion is no longer high priced. The most inexpensive things can be correct in fashion details. Things are produced easier, faster—and this mass production helps make more fashions and new fashions—and quicker changing fashions.

"There are fashions in foods, in newspapers, magazines, books, automobiles, golfing, tennis, table tennis, fact in almost everything said in stores," he says. "The public wants fashions, and refuses things that are not in fashion. That's why people fashion, as a guide to their buying."

The Anna Parrish organization also engaged in sales promotion, merchandising and advertising for manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers, as well as in fashion analysis and forecasting.

Anna Parrish will discuss in her articles such subjects as femininity in fashions, the length of dress, the fashionable type of hats, the new fabrics, fashionable colors, individuality in dress, the evening of fashions, evening fashions, sports wear, new fashions, home furnishings and other phases of the prevailing and incoming fashions as they apply to present-day life.

The first article, to appear July 1, will discuss what fashion is, the difference between a fashion and a style, how fashions change, how new ideas are introduced and gain acceptance. Anna Parrish's article will appear in Boston exclusively in the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Refuse to Hand Over Doherty as Slayer

On the ground that sufficient evidence of identity had not been produced, U. S. Commissioner E. C. Jenney today refused to turn over to the Canadian authorities Lester Doherty of Liverpool, Me., arrested in the local gun murder.

Canadian officials claim Doherty, arrested in the local gun murder, was the slayer of a woman, who was killed on April 30, 1929. Commissioner Jenney continued the case until October and gave the Canadian authorities until August 5 to produce more evidence.

MORRISSEY, 44 YRS. OFFICER, DIED TODAY

Veteran Detective Worked on the Garrett Case; the End Comes at Houghs Neck

Although apparently in the best of health when he retired last night, Inspector Michael J. Morrissey, for 44 years a member of the police department, died today at his summer home in Houghs Neck.

He was 68 and held a lieutenant's rank in the department. His home was at 50 Baldwin st., Charlestown.

Since the turning over of the Garrett case to District Attorney William E. Foley's office, Inspector Morrissey had been working on that case, but lately had been personal bodyguard of John P. Sullivan, proprietor of the old Lord Rice and key witness.

Inspector Morrissey was one of the best-known detectives in our country and was rated a leading expert on pickpockets.

DREADED BY CRIMINALS

He was born in Boston, June 25, 1861, and was 24 years old when he joined the police department in 1885. One of the toughest beats in the city fell to his lot as a patrolman, but the rough and tumble fighting he learned in Howard st., often found him in good stead when the inspector, light and of slim build, had a pickpocket or a hunky thief.

He became a special officer in the same department—loyal and in 1904 was promoted to sergeant. Six years later he was made inspector and sent to the bureau of criminal investigation.

Others, raising the official's duties tonight are Isaac C. Nelson, chief engineer of the hospital; payment; Harry C. Byrne, first assistant surgeon; James Hingon and Thomas Tolson, laborers employed by the park department; John Sheehan and William J. Marshall, and Patrick J. Crowley, draughtsman, all of the public works department; and Charles J. Hurst, chief, custodian of the H. H. H. of Commerce.

Dies Suddenly

AFTER 44 YEARS in the Boston police department, Inspector Michael J. Morrissey died at his summer home in Houghs Neck. He had been at work on the case of O. R. Garrett, fugitive ex-convict.

TEN IN SERVICE OF CITY RETIRE

The city employs two of these women who retire from active service at the close of business today.

Miss Margaret A. Sheehan, librarian of the South End branch of the public library, who has been in the service of the city since Sept. 7, 1915, is one of those who will go on the retired list tonight.

Others, raising the official's duties tonight are Isaac C. Nelson, chief engineer of the hospital; payment; Harry C. Byrne, first assistant surgeon; James Hingon and Thomas Tolson, laborers employed by the park department; John Sheehan and William J. Marshall, and Patrick J. Crowley, draughtsman, all of the public works department; and Charles J. Hurst, chief, custodian of the H. H. H. of Commerce.

FRUIT SAVERS WOMAN DIES

George and Charles Rollins, serving life for slaying a Dorchester man, were today sentenced to life in prison for the slaying of a woman, who was killed in a fruit store.

Morrissey went to Pennsylvania when James Murphy confessed to the murder. He was later released and helped prosecute him, but Morrissey never believed them guilty and spent his own time in private investigations.

Discussing commodity prices, Hay and Economic Society states in its current bulletin:

"The factors which favor stabilization of commodity prices are still present. The dollar volume of business is increasing relative to seasonal expectations—a development which, if it continues, will tend to offset a business contraction, not in the past been attended or followed by a rise in commodity prices. Consumption of manufactured goods is in general continuing to gain upon output. Fewer means have been accomplished by the Government to create situations, which have been particularly large in the classes leading to increased expenditures on commodities."

Three Big Forces Point Way to the Resumption of Prosperity of World

FISHER SEES POOLING OF WORLD'S GOLD AS MEANS

By IRVING FISHER,
Professor of Economics, Yale University.
New Haven, Ct., June 30—1
Great Britain unemployment by estimates, increased to 3,000,000; depression in business goes deeper, with restrictions on output in the iron and steel industry; production of consumer goods has reduced; her production of key industrial goods, Germany is trying to cut wages and prices simultaneously.

Irving Fisher—order not to increase living costs, and so that they may undersell other nations in foreign markets. In Italy iron and steel output is slowing down. The Swiss watchmaking industry dwindle. Swedish lumber interests suffer from decline in British consumption. Unemployment grows in Czechoslovakia, with stagnant textile, machinery and coal industries. In Austria industrial depression hangs on. As in Europe, so in Argentina, Brazil India and Australia a worldwide depression.

There is a worldwide commodity price slump, with stocks, unemployment and reduced purchasing power.

All this is reflected in the low price of American goods, and in the loss of the competitive edge, and in lessening of the ability of our own people to buy food, clothing and homes. It is a prime factor in the decrease in sales of more than 20 percent of the huge number of American companies representing many lines of industry and trade, for the first quarter of 1959, as compared by the National City Bank.

It accounts largely for the slow recovery from our business recession, which has roots in the same causes that have

VART GOLD SUPPLY

During the past seven years the United States has enjoyed unexampled prosperity, as measured by the average increase in real income for the whole people. With our command over a large part of the world's gold supply we have had abundant credit possibilities which were used, under the leadership of the federal reserve board, to stabilize the general level of prices and allow for business expansion. Not only with Europe. Until 1928, American investors lent liberally to European reconstruction, and debt payments due America by the allies did not press heavily on the

Not long as Europe, Canada, and Russia are able to borrow of the United States enough to meet their expanding needs, besides satisfying current payments on debt service, all apparently essential. The increase in the dollar has been added in increase in value of the dollar, or more than one-third during the deflation years 1928-31, increased the burden of the debt. The increase in the price of the dollar was roughly rectified by the scaling down of allied indebtedness. But the immense public and private loans still remaining are still in the same terms, at about 25 billions of dollars, have been subject to appreciation in value of the dollar by near

MONEY VALUES UNSTABLE. In addition, there was during 1928 and 1929 a tightening of credit all over the world, which was not mitigated until deflation had set in. Sir Josiah Stamp, during his recent visit to America, pointed out that money values had again become unstable, that the world stock of gold and its distribution had become insufficient, and that this condition had been reflected in the price of commodities and in commodity markets. The rise in purchasing power of the dollar had made it correspondingly more difficult for our foreign debtors.

world credits, and largely causing it, has been the growing mutual exclusiveness of national markets. Trade barriers have multiplied, and have become all pervasive. They bar almost all new states, and bar almost other customs districts, each with its own monetary system and frontiers forbidding imports. Each country has its own tariff system, and the prevailing trade war, accentuated by high industrial costs and restricted markets, has produced its inevitable consequences in denial of the principle of free trade on a world level. Besides, from almost all civilized nations has come forth a protest against the new American tariff law, which sets up a high barrier to their trade with the United States. But in signing the tariff, President Hoover has said that the complaints "can be met by a tariff commission. It is a violation to the tariff commission."

N. Y. State Starts Old Age Inquiry

Preliminary inquiry into the problem of the older workers in industries has been commenced by the New York Commission of Old Age Security.

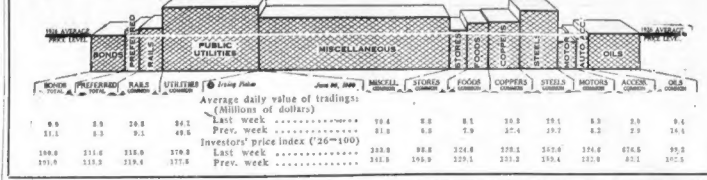

Blanks have been sent to employers throughout the state asking for a list of all workers over the payroll June 30, showing age, sex, character of work and years of service. The returns, the commission states, will be kept strictly confidential.

The commission says:

"Our inquiry into the problem of the older worker has demonstrated that public opinion has been divided, and the fact in the past that the older worker has been the victim of stereotyped and the least circulated stories of 'dead legs in industry.'"
